

PhD mini-course in Applications of Recursive Utility with Stanley Zin
NHH June 15th - June 19th 2009

Stanley Zin is a leading scholar in macroeconomics and finance. His one-week mini course will focus on intertemporal decisions under uncertainty, with applications to precautionary savings, risk sharing and asset pricing. He will cover recursive utility theory, which has become a workhorse in macroeconomics and finance.

Call for papers

The 5th NHH-UiO Workshop for Economic Dynamics

The workshop will be organized in conjunction with Stanley Zin's PhD mini course in Applications of Recursive Utility. In addition to Zin, a number of faculty members from NHH and the University of Oslo will attend the conference and give feedback on the presentations. These include Gernot Doppelhofer, Espen Henriksen, Thore Johnsen, Finn Kydland, Krisztina Molnar and Kjetil Storesletten.

The aim of the Workshop is to offer young researchers interested in macroeconomics broadly defined – including dynamic aggregate economics, financial economics, dynamic economic decisionmaking and policy – a forum for presentation and discussion of their own work. Both theoretical and empirical work is welcome. Work in progress by doctoral students is particularly welcome. PhD students who will attend the workshop are strongly encouraged to also sign up for the mini-course.

Interested scholars should send a copy of the paper they wish to submit and an abstract, in electronic form as .pdf file, no later than May 8th, 2009 to:

nhh.uio.macro@gmail.com

The front page of the paper should indicate: the title of the paper, names and affiliations of the authors, the name of the author to whom any information concerning the meeting should be sent, telephone numbers and e-mail address.
